Desert Friends

In the hot, sunny desert, there lived a brave cactus named Cacto and a cheerful tumbleweed named Tumbly. They were the best of friends. Every day, they would play hide and seek among the sand dunes. Cacto was always easy to find because he couldn't move, but he didn't mind. He loved to see Tumbly rolling around, laughing and having fun. One day, a strong wind blew Tumbly far away. Cacto was alone and sad. He missed his friend. But he remembered Tumbly's laughter and decided to be brave. Days turned into weeks, but Cacto never lost hope. He knew Tumbly would come back. And sure enough, one sunny day, Tumbly rolled back. He was full of stories about his adventures. Cacto listened and smiled. He was happy to have his friend back. From then on, they played every day, cherishing their friendship. And whenever the wind blew, Cacto would say, "Go have fun, Tumbly. I'll be here when you come back." And Tumbly would roll away, knowing he would always have a friend in the desert.
